Air pollution is Hong Kong's most serious public health crisis, killing over 1,100 people every year. I urge the Government to improve our air quality until pollution is no longer a significant threat to my health, by:

- Adopting the WHO Air Quality Guidelines and setting an early date to comply.
- Focusing clean-up measures on roadside emissions, the biggest local source of health impacts.
- Improving accountability by reporting the health impacts of air pollution every year.
